

Sitar Arts Center is featured in the December issue of Washingtonian Magazine's cover story as one of "64 Ways to Do Good." A brief profile of Sitar Arts Center is on page 78, along with ways that people can support the Center. In choosing groups to highlight, the article says, "We heard good things about more than 300 charities, and narrowing it down was hard. We chose the groups that were recommended most often and most enthusiastically." Being included in this list speaks to the support the Center has in the community.

Thank you to everyone who has helped make Sitar Arts Center one of Washington's great "ways to do good."